The Hollow * * Of Her Hand
George Barr McCutcheon
COPYRIGHT, FIRE BY DOLD, MEAD & COMPANY

At last her hands, claw-like in their

A Great Shudder Ran Through Her

Body.

they closed the door.

window. It squealed like a thing in Ten minutes passed. The group in "Poor thing," said the innkeeper's

"Well," said Drake, taking a deep breath, "she won't have to worry any more about his not coming home

Hundred will have a conniption fit."

"We've got to land that girl, whoever she is," grated the official. "Now that we know who he is, it shouldn't

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

the hall conversed in whispers.

expecting her to collapse.

while.

CHAPTER I.

stopping of the fast express at B-

The woman who got down at Bat it would amply reward him

She took several uncertain steps in and stopped, as if bewildered, Already know.

toward her.

"Yes."

the roar of the wind.

She advanced quickly,

"Is this Mr. Drake?"

weight against the door to close it.

"Yes, Mrs. Wrandall. I have done all that could be done under the circumstances. I am sorry to tell you

A Man Rushed Toward Her.

that we still have two miles to go by motor before we reach the inn. My car is open-I don't possess a limoutenneau you will find some protection

She broke in sharply, impatiently,

"Pray do not consider me, Mr. Drake.

"Then we'd better be off," said he.

a note of anxiety in his voice-a certain touch of nervousness. "I drive shall drive cautiously. Ten minutes, perhaps. I-I am sorry you thought

"I am not sorry for myself, Mr.

most kind. I did not expect you to you. It was well that I did it early

I am not afraid of the blizzard."

best to brave this wretched-"

March Comes in Like the Lion. The train, which had roared through a withering gale of sleet all the way may be wrong. Still, the coroner—and er—ordeal tonight." up-from New York, came to a standstill, with many an ear-splitting sigh, tioned. That is why I called you up. alongside the little station, and a redoor to descend to the snow-swept platform: a solitary passenger had reached the journey's end. The swirl blackness at the end of the station neither acquiescence nor approval.

He was ill at ease, distressed. "I your sake, I hope he is mistaken." building enveloped the porter in an have engaged a room for you at the instant, and cut his ears and neck with tinging force as he turned his back gainst the gale. A pair of lonely, over from our place to stay with you thing. You need not hesitate." talf-obscured platform lights gleamed 'atuously at the top of their ley posts if youit each end of the station; two or

She shook her head. "Thank you, three frost-incrusted windows glowed Mr. Drake. It will not be necessary. dully in the side of the building, while I came alone by choice. I shall reone shone brightly where the operator | turn to New York tonight."

"But you-why, you can't do that," sat waiting for the passing of No. 33. he cried, holding back as they started An order had been issued for the toward the door. "No trains stop here a noteworthy concession in these days after ten o'clock. The locals begin of premeditated haste. Not in the pre- running at seven in the morning. Bevious career of flying 33 had it even so | sides-

much as slowed down for the insig-She interrupted him, "May we not nificant little station, through which start now, Mr. Drake? I am-well, it swooped at midnight the whole year you must see that I am suffering. I with the sheriff. The men looked worn red," she announced to the sheriff round. Just before pulling out of New | must see, I must know. The sus- and haggard in the bright light that | without giving Drake another thought. York on this eventful night the conductor received a command to stop sentence, but hurried past him to the sleep or rest for many hours, 33 at B- and let down a single past door, throwing it open and bending senger, a circumstance which meant her body to the gust that burst in upon trouble for every dispatcher along the them.

He sprang after her, grasping her arm to lead her across the icy platin the wake of the shivering but deferform to the automobile that stood in ential porter, and who passed by the the lee of the building.

conductors without lifting her face, Disdaining his command to enter was without hand luggage of any dethe tonneau, she stood beside the car scription. She was heavily veiled, and and waited until he cranked it and warmly clad in furs. At eleven o'clock took his place at the wheel. Then she that night she had entered the com- took her seat beside him and permitpartment in New York. Throughout ted him to tuck the great buffalo robe the thirty miles or more she had sat about her. No word was spoken. The alone and inert beside the snowman was a stranger to her. She forclogged window, peering through veil got his presence in the car.

and frost into the night that whizzed Into the thick of the storm the mopast the pane, seeing nothing yet ap- tor chugged. Grim and silent, the parently intent on all that stretched man at the wheel, ungoggled and beyond. As still, as immobile as tense, sent the whirring thing swiftly death itself she had held herself from over the trackless village street and the moment of departure to the instant out upon the open country road. The that brought the porter with the word woman closed her eyes and waited.

that they were whistling for B---. You would know the month was Without a word she arose and fol- March. He said: "It comes in like lowed him to the vestibule, where she a lion," but apparently the storm swalwatched him as he unfastened the lowed the words for she made no reouter door and lifted the trap. A sponse to them.

single word escaped her lips and he They crossed the valley and crept held out his hand to receive the crum- up the tree-covered hill, where the pled bill she clutched in her gloved force of the gale was broken. If she fingers. He did not look at it. He heard him say: "Fierce, wasn't it?" she gave no sign, but sat hunched for for the brief exposure he endured on ward, peering ahead through the snow the lonely, wind-swept platform of a at the blurred lights that seemed so station, the name of which he did not far away and yet were close at hand.

"Is that the inn?" she asked as he swerved from the road a few moments the direction of the station windows later.

"Yes, Mrs. Wrandall. We're here. "Is-is he in there?"

the engine was pounding the air with quick, vicious snorts in the effort to "Where you see that lighted window get under way; the vestibule trap and upstairs." He tooted the horn vigdoor closed with a bang; the wheels orously as he drew up to the long, low were creaking. A bitter wind smote porch. Two men dashed out from the her in the face; the wet, hurtling sleet doorway and clumsily assisted her crashed against the thin veil, blinding from the car.

"Go right in, Mrs. Wrandall," said The door of the waiting room across Drake. "I will join you in a jiffy." She walked between the two men the platform opened and a man rushed into the feebly lighted office of the "Mrs. Wrandall?" he called above inn. The keeper of the place, a dreary looking person with dread in his eyes, hurried forward. She stopped, stock still. Some one was brushing the "What a night!" he said, as much to stubborn, thickly caked snow from her himself as to her. "I'm sorry you long chinchilla coat.

"You must let me get you some would insist on coming tonight. Tomorrow morning would have satisfied thing hot to drink, madam," the landlord was saying dolorously.

She struggled with her veil, finally tearing it away from her face. Then They were being blown through the she took in the rather bare, cheerless door into the waiting room as she put room with a slow, puzzled sweep of the question. Her voice was muffled. The man in the great fur coat put his her eyes.

"No, thank you," she replied. "It won't be any trouble, madam," sheriff says it's all right to serve it, although it is after hours. I run a respectable, law-abiding house. wouldn't think of offering it to anyone if it was in violation-

"Never mind, Burton," interposed a big man, approaching. "Let the lady and that was very soon after Burton's kind that usually comes out here on choose for herself. If she wants it. she'll say so. I am the sheriff, madam. This gentleman is the coroner, Dr. Sheef. We waited up for you after Mr. Drake said you'd got the fast train to stop for you. Tomorrow morning would have done quite as well. I'm sorry you came tonight in all this blizzard."

He was staring as if fascinated at the white, colorless face of the woman a chair. A small service carving cially prepared supper about half an who with nervous fireers unfastened the heavy coat that enveloped her driven square'y into his heart and was slender figure. She was young and strikingly beautiful, despite the intense pallor that overspread her face. Her dark, questioning, dreading eyes looked up into his with an expression he was never to forget. It combined dread, horror, doubt and a smoldering anger that seemed to overcast all other emotions that lay revealed to

"This is a-what is commonly called a 'road house'?" she asked dully, her sine-but if you will lie down in the eyes narrowing suddenly as if in pain. "It is an inn during the winter, Mrs. Wrandall, and a road house in the tions, the woman apparently paying be the one to offer a suggestion that face of a frightened cowboy, is pale orderly minds which are prone to resummer, if that makes it plain to you. will say, however, that Burton has always kept well within "the law. This is the first - er - real bit of trouble he's had, and I won't say it's ing. his fault. Keep quiet, Burton. No one my own car. The road is good, but I is accusing you of anything wrong.

Don't whine about it." "But my place is ruined," groaned the doleful one. "It's got a black eye now. Not that I blame you, madam, Drake, but for you. You have been but you can see howin her eyes, and turned away mum-"I took the liberty of telephoning to | bling.

"There is a fire in the reception is the evening. The wires are down room, madain," said the coroner; "and now, I fear." He hesitated for a mo- the proprietor's wife to look out for it, staring at her as if trying to you if you should require anything should be notified-I might say ques- said she steadily.

ready for her?" "I shall not stay here tonight," in obvious why he removed the numterposed Mrs. Wrandall. "You need bers."

not keep the room for me." "But, my dear Mrs. Wrandal --! "I shall wait in the railway station recognize him, until morning if necessary. But not here. The coroner led the way to the cosy little room off the office. She followed pense-" She did not complete the met them, as if they had not known here until eleven, but went home to Wrandall's body stiffened perceptibly, get a little rest. It's been a hard case for all of us-a nasty one," explained standing in the garage, where he left the sheriff, as he placed a chair in it on his arrival. front of the fire for her. She sank into it limply.

she could do anything to make her swer, more comfortable.

The sheriff cleared his throat, "Well, we've been trying to find out who he morning we've been searching for the woman who came here with him. She has disappeared as completely as if swallowed by the earth. Not a sign of a clew-not a shred. There's nothing to show when she left the inn or by what means. All we know is that the door to that room up there was dressed. Her coat was one of those standing half open when Burton passed by it at seven o'clock this morning-that is to say, yesterday morning, for this is now Wednesday. It is quite clear, from this, that she neglected to close the door tightly when she came out, probably through haste or fear, and the draft in the hall blew it wider open during the night. Burton says the inn was closed for the night at half-past ten. He went to bed. She must have slipped out after everyone was sound asleep. floor. Burton and his wife sleep on coat." urged the other. "It's right here. The this floor, and the servants are at the top of the house and in a wing. No woman's face. "I am five feet six," one heard a sound. We have not the she said, as if answering a question. remotest idea when the thing happened, or whest she left the place. Dr. what needlessly, Sheef says the man had been dead six or eight hours when he first saw him, were a lady," he went on. "Not the discovery. Burton, on finding the door such expeditions, he admits. She did open, naturally suspected that his not speak to anyone, except once in night to avoid paying the bill, and lost with, and then she was standing by no time in enering the room.

She Sank Into It Limply

sprawled out, face upward and as went upstairs alone, and he gave some dead as a mrck-I should say, quite orders to Burton before following her. dead. He was partly dressed. His That was the last time Burton saw coat and vest hung over the back of her. The waitress went up with a speknife, belonging to the inn, had been hour later." that the man on their arrival at the stabbing him," said the coroner. inn, about nine o'clock at night, or pagne bottle, was found on the service put aside a half-formed conclusion. table near the bed. One of the chairs "His pockets were empty. Not a just as she was when she came into office.' the place. The man gave all the direc-The waitress left the room without this woman?" seeing her face. She had instructions not to come for the tray until morn- that some one else might have taken "That was the last time the man sheriff, was seen alive. No one has seen the woman since the door closed after the servant, who distinctly remembers one about this place is suspected. We hearing the key turn in the lock as have thought of this, however: the she went down the hall. It seems murderess may have taken all of pretty clear that the man ate and these things away with her in order He qualled before the steady look drank but not the wome. Her food to prevent immediate identification of remained untouched on the plate and her victim. She may have been clever her glass was full. 'Gad, I must have enough for that. It would give her a been a merry feast! I be your par- start." ion, Mrs. Wrandall!"

penetrate the thick, wet veil. "I may Will you go in there and compose the actual crime is concerned. There that very particular," said Mrs. Wran- looking, as motionless as the object on have brought you on a fool's errand. yourself before going upstairs? Or, were signs of a struggle—but it isn't dall in such a self-contained way that which she gazed. Behind her were the You see, I-I have seen Mr. Wrandall if you would prefer waiting until necessary to go into that. Now, as to the three men looked at her in won- tense, keen-eyed men, not one of but once, in town somewhere, and I morning, I shall not insist on the- their arrival at the inn. The blizzard der. Then she came abruptly to her whom seemed to breathe during the had not set in. Last night was dark, feet. "It is very late, gentlemen. I grim minutes that passed. The wind the sheriff-seemed to think you "I prefer going up there tonight," of course, as there is no moon, but it am ready to go upstairs, Mr. Sheriff." howled about the corners of the inn, at the postage rate which controls in was clear and rather warm for the The men looked at each other, and time of year. The couple came here Drake is reasonably certain that it is beating of their hearts, even the tickluctant porter opened his vestibule I trust, madam, that I am mistaken." the sheriff spoke. "Mr. Drake is quite about nine o'clock in a high power run- your hueband," said the coroner un-"Yes," she said shrilly, betraying the confident the-the man 'is your hus- about machine, which the man drove. comfortably. "You may not be pre- of the wind. intensity of her emotion. It was as band. It's an ugly affair, Mrs. Wran- They had no hand baggage and appar- pared for the shock that-" if she lacked the power to utter more dall. We had no means of identifying ently had run out from New York. of snow and sleet screaming out of the than a single word, which signified him until Drake came in this evening, Burton says he was on the point of is my husband I shall ask you to leave Her head dropped slightly forward, out of curiosity you might say. For refusing them accommodations when me alone in the room with him for a the man handed him a hundred-dollar little while." The final word trailed body. The coroner started forward, "Would you mind telling me some bill. It was more than Burton's cu- out into a long, tremulous wall, showinn, Mrs. Wrandall. You did not bring thing about it before I go upstairs? I pidity could withstand. They did not ing how near she was to the breaking a maid, I see. My wife will come am quite calm. I am prepared for any register. The state license numbers point in her wonderful effort at selfhad been removed from the automo- control. The men looked away hast-

> At this juncture Drake entered the fessional firmness. "You must not room. Mrs. Wrandall did not at first think of venturing out in this wretched

"It has stopped snowing," announced the newcomer. "Oh, it is Mr. Drake," she murmured, sense,

"We have a little French car, painted you-"And this one is red, madam," said the sheriff, with a glance at the coro-"The assistant district attorney was ner. Drake nodded his head. Mrs. as if deflecting a blow. "It is still

"Did no one see the face of-of the woman?" asked Mrs. Wrandall, rather feelings. It would be asking too "Go on, please," she murmured, and querulously. "It seems odd that no shook her head at the nervous little one should have seen her face," she woman who bustled up and inquired if went on without waiting for an an-

"It's not strange, madam, when you consider all the circumstances. She t happened last night. All day long was very careful not to remove her is, and ever since eight o'clock this locked. That proves that she was not veil or her coat until the door was the sort of woman we usually find gailavanting around with men regardless of-ahem, I beg your pardon. This must be very distressing to you."

"I am not sure, Mr. Sheriff, that it is my husband who lies up there. Please remember that," she said steadily. "It is easier to hear the details now, before I know, than it will be afterward if it should turn out to be as Mr. Drake declares." "I see," said the sheriff, marveling.

"Besides, Mr. Drake is not positive," put in the coroner hopefully. "I am reasonably certain," said

Drake. Then all the more reason why with a shiver that no one failed to ob-

The sheriff resumed his conclusions. Women of the kind I referred to a brazen about it. But this one was different. She was as far from that as it was possible for her to be. We haven't been able to find anyone who saw her face or who can give the least idea as to what she looks like, excepting a general description of her figure. her carriage and the outdoor garments she wore. We have reason to believe she was young. She was modestly heavy uleter affairs, such as a woman uses in motoring or on a sea voyage. There was a small sable stole about her neck. The skirt was short, and she wore high black shoes of the thick walking type. Judging from he drew back and turned his face a fearful sensation, sheriff. The Four been about your size and figure, Mrs. Wrandall. Isn't that so, Mrs. Bur-

The innkeeper's wife spoke. Mr. Harben, I'd say so myself. About There were no other guests on that and graceful like, in spite of the big

> Mrs. Wrandall was watching the The sheriff cleared his throat some

"Burton says she acted as if the fireplace out in the main office, "He found the man lying on the bed, quite a distance from the desk. She

"It seems quite clear, Mrs. Wranfound sticking there. Burton says dall, that she robbed the man after

Mrs. Wrandall started. "Then sh dered supper sent up to the room. was not a lady, after all," she said The tray of dishes, with most of the quickly. There was a note of relief food untouched, and an empty cham- in her voice. It was as if she had was overturned. The servant who took penny had been left. Watch, cuff the meal to the room says that the links, scarf pin, cigarette case, purse woman was sitting at the window and bill folder-all gone. Burton had with her wraps on, motor veil and all, seen most of these articles in the "Isn't it-but no! Why should !

no attention to what was going on might be construed as a defense for "You were about to suggest, madam, the valuables-is that it?" cried the

"Had you thought of it, Mr. Sheriff? "I had not. It isn't reasonable. No

"Not an unreasonable conclusion, "Go ob, please," said she levelly. when you stop to consider, Mr. Sher-thent of Europe. One already aware of the three greatest subdivisions of That's all there is to ear no fir as iff, that the man took the initiative in of this view, who thought he was modern society."

"I must warn you, madam, that Mr. but no one heard it. They heard the

"I shall not faint. Dr. Sheef. If it tenseness, went slowly to her temples. "As you wish, madam. You will go bile, which was of foreign make. Of lly. They heard her draw two or into the reception room, if you please. course it was only a question of time three deep, quavering breaths; they Burton, is Mrs. Wrandall's room quite until we could have found out who could almost feel the tension that she looked at each other with a single the car belonged to. It is perfectly was exercising over herself. The doctor turned after a moment and spoke very gently, but with pronight, madam. It would be the worst kind of folly. Surely you will be guided by me-by your own common Mrs. Burton will be with

"Thank you, Dr. Sheef," she interposed calmly. "If what we all fear should turn out to be the truth, I could not stay here. I could not breathe. I could not live. If, on the other hand, Mr. Drake is mistaken, I shall stay. But if it is my husband, I cannot remain under the same roof with him, even though he be dead. I do not expect you to understand my much of men-too much. "I think I understand," murmured

Drake. "Come," said the sheriff, arousing imself with an effort.

She moved swiftly after him. Drake and the coroner, following close behind with Mrs. Burton, could not take their eyes from the slender, graceful figure. She was a revelation to them. Feeling as they did that she was about | They hesitated. to be confronted by the most appalling crisis imaginable, they could not but spreading her arms in a wide gesture marvel at her composure. Drake's of self-absolution. Her somber eyes mind dwelt on the stories of the guillo- swept the group. tine and the herolnes who went up to it in those bloody days without so much as a quiver of dread. Somehow, last time-alone. Will you go?" to him, this woman was a heroine.

nounted the stairs. At the far end guarded. As he did so, a chilly blast Can you understa should have the story first," said she, the hall. The curtains in the window ping in the wind. Mrs. Wrandall instant it seemed as though she was moment ago don't care whether they're on the point of faltering. She dropped seen or not. In fact, they're rather farther behind the sheriff, her limbs me!" suddenly stiff, her hand going out to the wall as if for support. The next the room. She watched them until moment she was moving forward resolutely into the icy, dimly lighted

A single electric light gleamed in the corner beside the bureau. Near fear, the window stood the bed. She went swiftly toward it, her eyes fastened upon the ridge that ran through the center of it: a still, white ridge that seemed without beginning or end.

With nervous fingers the attendant lifted the sheet at the head of the bed and turned it back. As he let it fall across the chest of the dead man nights. I say, this business will create away.

She bent forward and then straightened her figure to its full height, without for an instant removing her gaze from the face of the man who lay be hard to pick out the women he's before her: a dark-haired man gray in been trailing with lately. Then we five feet six, I'd judge; rather slim death, who must have been beautiful can sift 'em down until the right one to look upon in the flush of life.

is left. It ought to be easy." For a long time she stood there

READY PRINTS

Admitted to Mails and May Now Be Carried By Parcel Post

Rights of Publishers Recognized By the Postoffice Department and the Postmaster General.

Washington, D. C .- It will be of local interest to the publishers of newspapers all over the United States to learn that Postmaster General Burleson has decided to admit ready-prints to the privileges of the parcel post and that branch of the service. This will be a boon to the craft, as a "Partially Printed Newspaper Service" has not enjoyed mail privileges, and great difficulty has often been experienced in securing delivery to publishers.

The credit for securing this victory and a great shudder ran through her for the country publishers is due to Charles C. Hart, of Spokane, Wash., secretary to Representative Lafollette, "Please go away," she was saying of that state. Mr. Hart formerly was in an absolutely emotionless voice. a country publisher in Indiana and is "Let me stay here alone for a little familiar with all the hardships of the man who prints a paper in the rural That was all. The men relaxed. They districts.

Determined to Relieve Situation.

He determined that he would relieve the situation as regards the delivery of "Partially Printed Newspaper Service," and his first step was to secure the co-operation of Senator Jones, of Washington. Together they went to call on the Postmaster General. Representing the publishers, Mr. Hart made a statement which convinced the Postmaster General that "Partially Printed Newspaper Service" should be entitled to the parcel post privilege. In his statement Mr. Hart said:

"We wish to submit that these papers represent an unfinished product and consequently should be classed as a manufactured article, rather than as printed matter.

"These sheets are not completed until they reach the office of publication, and therefore may be said to be only in course of manufacture when shipped to the country publisher. This involves a question which is a serious one to the country newspaper of a vast section of the country, particularly in the West and Southwest.

State and Nation-Wide Information.

question in their eyes. Was it quite "By the present classification these safe to leave her alone with her dead? ready-prints are denied admission to the mails, the only system of trans-She turned on them suddenly, portation which reaches into every village and town. The express companies fail to operate to many points where newspapers are published-"I can do no harm. This man is places remote from arilroads-thus mine. I want to look at him for the compelling the publisher, already hampered by a limited field, to have his "Do you mean, madam, that you in-They passed into the hall and tend to-" began the coroner in alarm. ready prints delivered either by some She clasped her hands. "I mean special messenger arrangement, at of the corridor a man was seated in that I shall take my last look at him great expense, or deny his readers the front of a closed door. He arose as now-and here. Then you may do advantages of the general news inforthe party approached. The sheriff what you like with him. He is your mation which the ready-print makes it signed for him to open the door he dead-not mine. I do not want him. possible for him to supply. Where the of air blew upon the faces of those in this dead thing. But there is some- ing his patrons this State-wide and nathing I should say to him, something tion-wide information, the heavy exof the room were flapping and whip that I must say. Something that no pense of transportation for the delivone must hear but the good God who ery of his ready-prints, it should be recaught her breath. For the briefest knows how much he has hurt me. I membered, can not be saddled upon want to say it close to those gray, hor- the subscribers. While the best of livrid ears. Who knows? He may hear ing and of luxuries has steadily advanced in the last few years, the subscription of the country newspaper has Wondering, the others backed from remained stationary, and the rate per thousand circulation for advertising has not been increased. Listening, they heard her lower the

"It is not our contention that the country publisher is being discriminated against purposely, but we believe that when the present classification was made it was then too early to take into account the fact that the country newspaper business is unlike other lines of publishing.

"The country newspaper, we submit, is a quasi-public utility, in evidence of which is the fact that it is being maintained in scores of towns and villages by public-spirited citizens who receive not one penny of dividends on their investment. There is but very small expansion possible to the business of the larger number of these rural publications, and the publisher, as a rule, earns little more than a living, yet the existence of such a paper in practically every town of 300 or more is deemed a public necessity. It reflects public sentiment in the community and voices the local needs, and therefore can not be regarded solely as a commercial enterprise.

Postmaster General Burleson issued the following order (7,800), which gives the country publishers the relief asked: "The limit of weight for miscellane ous printed matter constituting thirdclass mail, the rate of postage on which is I cent for each two ounces or fraction thereof, is four pounds. Parcels of miscellaneous printed matter weighing more than four pounds, but which are within the limit of weight and size for matter of the fourth class, come within that class and are mailable at the pound rates of postage prescribed for fourth class matter in Section 456.

This order was signed by the Postmaster General himself.

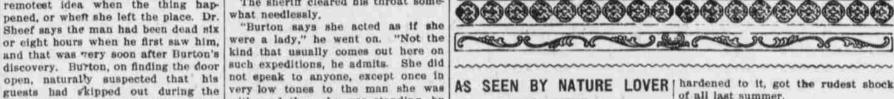

The U. S. Government and Postoffice authorities by the above order recognize the rights of Publishers and the fact that many of the larger and blgger weeklies now use the "Partially Printed Newspaper Service."

The transportation rate on large shipments is cheaper by express than by Parcel Post, but many of the smaller publishers will get a lower rate on

For Religious Editor to Say.

A little girl had received a beautiful card bearing an inscription: "Honor thy father and thy mother, etc." "She is certainly clever," said a caller, speaking of the sender of the card; I wonder if she made that up herself or copied it out of some book?"-Houston Post.

"Does your father object to kissing?" 'I dont' know. Shall I tell him that you would like to wise him?"

Frost and Drought Very Much Alike in Their Effects Upon Good Old Mother Earth.

their results, or at least their effects. er "How to Learn Italian," and so on. A winter meadow, bare of snow but frozen hard, is not very dissimilar to with an uninterested air when his exthe same meadow during a dry spell pression suddenly changed to one of after haying. Color is gone, growth utter amazement. Casting his eve is short, stones show like land turtles, on still another of the little red books the soil is impenetrable, the wheel of he read on its cover: nature is on a dead point. Only the hedgerows, in either case, retain some life and color. You look at the foothole pits in the of mild moisture comes .- From "A sweet .- Exchange.

of all last summer. In a Paris book store window he saw several little red books. "How to Learn German." was the title of one of them. Another was Frost and drought are not unlike in called "How to Learn Spanish," anoth-The American was looking at them

"How to Learn American!"

Dissensions in families often rise ground, made when you rode that way from a lack of humility and too much last fall or spring, as the case may presumption on the part of the differbe, and wonder that the ground would ent members of the family. "The soft ever have been soft enough to receive answer that turneth away wrath" is such impressions, while that pools of forgotten for the hasty reply, the unwater could ever have stood upon it kind retorts that kindle the fire of illseems impossible. The earth, like the feeling and are the outcome of disto the obliteration of its natural tan; sentment on account of lacking in the and, again like the cowboy, this only gentle grace of humility. Love does their weekly shipments. departs when he draws rein at home. not linger in the house where petty Then it is good to see, even in win- pride shows its unlovely qualities. It ter, how the tints hasten back, and chooses to dwell in the home where brown skin and stubby beard assume the spirit of unselfishness, of selftheir natural hues; for even in win- control, of thoughtfulness and of ter there is color, whenever a spell charitableness makes the atmosphere Farmer's Notebook," by E. D. Phelps.

The following assertion of A. M. Glo-Americans traveling abroad soon vannitti opens up an interesting discusfind out that the language they speak sion; "All social morality today is is not looked upon always as genuine class movality. We have a capitalistic nglish, either by the haughty Eng- morality a middle class morality and tshman or the natives of the con- s proletarian morality, to speak only